

CBHC BOARD POSITION STATEMENT 20.0:

Emergency Preparedness and Response

Position Statement

Colorado must maintain and enhance a coordinated behavioral health emergency and disaster response and ensure the permanency of robust resources for preparedness.

Background

Colorado's 17 Community Mental Health Centers (CMHCs) provide services to every Colorado community through historically established regional catchment areas. Since their inception, the CMHCs have been an active participant in responses to local, state-wide, and national emergencies and disasters.

Over the years, Colorado's CMHCs have responded to critical incidents such as:

- Suicides and the community aftermath
- Homicides, child abductions, and hostage situations
- Terrorism, active shooter events and mass casualty events
- Natural disasters both locally and nationwide, including fires, tornadoes, floods and, hurricanes.

For over 20 years, engagement and collaborative planning with local community partners regarding emergency preparedness has been critical to implement behavioral health expertise and assuring community adaptive functions.

In 2006, CBHC members collaborated with the Colorado Department of Human Services, Division of Behavioral Health, to develop a statewide partnership and structure for behavioral health disaster response, which resulted in:

- Establishment of the Colorado Crisis Education and Response Network (CoCERN) and;
- The CoCERN Protocol and Guidance Document

CMHCs are committed to sustaining emergency preparedness efforts, participating on Regional Health Care Coalitions, and providing comprehensive services to Coloradans in their time of need.

The CMHCs can often leverage a wide range of resources to provide emergency response and recovery, when called to assist communities. Preparedness requirements do not have the same financial support, though each CMHC has a dedicated emergency team. Emergency preparedness is built into the structure of the CMHCs, and the Center for Medicare/Medicaid Services (CMS) also has defined requirements. CMS defines CMHC expectations to include the following four core elements of emergency preparedness:

- 1.) Risk Assessment and Emergency Planning
- 2.) Policies and Procedures for Emergency Preparedness Planning
- 3.) Current Emergency Communications Plan
- 4.) Training and practicing existing Emergency Preparedness Plan

These responsibilities and commitments ensure that CMHCs participate in statewide initiatives and regional coalitions to develop resources, procedures, and protocols for emergency response.

Policy Priorities

20.1 Coordinated Behavioral Health Response to Emergencies and Disasters

For decades, Colorado's Community Mental Health Centers (CMHCs) have followed a precise process for coordination and response to emergencies and disasters. In times of greatest needs, Colorado communities have come to depend on the presence of one or more centers working together to meet the needs of the communities at risk.

- ❖ CBHC supports the continuation of state and federal programs that coordinate community partners in a collaborative response to community crises.
 - Robust funding for councils, boards, and other response coordination planning efforts.
 - Adequately support communities in need during an emergency or disaster through a mix of local, state, and federal resources to sustain the availability of cross-system providers.
- ❖ CBHC supports policies, regulation, and legislation that continues Colorado's CMHC's ability to respond to any range of community crisis.
 - Sufficient resources and flexible funding to respond to mass disasters, community crisis, emergency situations, and other acute crises that require behavioral health professionals' response for periods of time ranging from hours to years.

20.2 Emergency Preparedness Initiatives

Colorado's communities are most effective in responding to an emergency when preparedness efforts have been comprehensive and collaborative across systems. To be most effective, emergency preparedness efforts need to be adequately organized and funded to meet communities' need.

- ❖ CBHC supports policies that formalize the CMHCs' emergency preparedness endeavors and create sustainability of these activities across Colorado communities.
 - Sustainable, permanent funding for emergency preparedness for every CMHC, overseen by the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment (CDPHE).
 - Sustainable opportunities for specialty teams, center personnel, community partners, and community member education for emergency preparedness:
 - Psychological First Aid for emergency response clinicians and support personnel.
 - Formal processes for community engagement and the demonstration of preparedness effort deliverables.
 - Availability of and access to CoCERN Field Response Training for professionals.
